

marginal product of labor

 (mar-gin-al-prod-uct-of-la-bor)

Definition

n. the additional output produced as a result of adding one more unit of labor, holding other inputs constant. this concept is essential in economics for understanding how labor contributes to production.

Example Sentence

The marginal product of labor helps businesses determine the optimal number of workers needed for maximum efficiency.

More Example Sentences

An increase in the marginal product of labor can indicate higher productivity levels within a company.

Synonyms

incremental output; additional production; labor contribution

Antonyms

diminishing returns; reduced output; labor inefficiency

